'Her'story: Encountering Women in The Filson's Special Collections - A Two-Part Series

Jennie Cole, Sarah Jane Poindexter and Robin Wallace, Associate Curators of Special Collections

The Filson Historical Society

Friday, July 22 and Friday, July 29 - Noon

It is The Filson's mission to collect, preserve, and tell the significant stories of Kentucky and Ohio Valley history and culture; join us as the women of the Special Collections Department tell the stories of the women preserved through The Filson's Special Collections. This two-part lecture series will explore various themes of women's history by detailing specific women represented in The Filson's collections from the 18th through the 20th centuries. Part I of the lecture will cover the topics of Women in Early Domestic Environments, Women and War, and Women and Education, while Part II will explore Women and Activism, Women and the Arts, and Women in Professions.

Steamboats: The Remaking of the Falls of the Ohio, 1811 - 1860, Part II

Mark Wetherington, Director
The Filson Historical Society
Friday, August 5 - Noon

2011 marks the bicentennial of steamboat navigation on the Ohio River. Steamboats introduced a powerful new technology to the region, changed river travel, and turned small landings into bustling towns. Come hear about how steamboat travel influenced the remaking of the Falls of the Ohio.

Religion, Slavery, and the Coming of the Civil War in the Ohio Valley

A. Glenn Crothers, Director of Research.

The Filson Historical Society

Friday, August 12 - Noon

Many white and black residents of the antebellum Ohio Valley turned to their faith to make sense of the institution of slavery and the deepening sectional divide. While evangelical supporters of slavery devised an elaborate defense of slaveholding based on the precepts of the Bible, other believers became convinced of slavery's immorality. African American Christians read in the Bible a message of equality and emancipation, as did a growing number of white believers who concluded that slavery could not be reconciled with Christian notions of spiritual equality and the golden rule. This talk explores this clash of religious interpretation that lay at the heart of the sectional conflict in the Ohio Valley.

Dr. A. Glenn Crothers is associate professor of history at the University of Louisville and Director of Research at The Filson Historical Society, where he is also co-editor of Ohio Valley History.

Reservations are suggested.

Parking at The Filson

When visiting The Filson, we realize that parking can be at a premium. We would like to remind you that we have an additional parking lot available to our members and guests. The lot is located at the corner of W. Ormsby Avenue and S. Third Street, across from the First Church of Christ, Scientist. The entrance to the lot is located on W. Ormsby. In the event that both lots are full, street parking is available at no charge on S. Third Street below W. Ormsby.
