

gough a

made him among the first cotton settlers

(Perrin, p.1133

CORNELIUS GOUGH, an early settler in Scott county, moved with his family to Breckinridge county shortly after 1810, and took up his home along the Ohio river just below Flint Island. He died of cholera in 1833, while on a trading expedition in the South. His wife, whose given name was Winifred, passed away in 1837, age 55 years. Their children were: 1) Thomas J., 2) Matilda, 3) Susan, 4) William Henry, 5) Eliza (Elizabeth) G., 6) Theresa, and 7) Cecilia Gough.

1) THOMAS J. GOUGH was born in 1805. In later years, he served in the offices of constable, jailer, and associate justice of Breckinridge county. Having removed to Meade county, he was elected to the State Legislature in 1837, and was a member of the constitutional convention of 1849. He also served that county as school commissioner for several years until his death in 1873.

Made to marriage book Book A.

Thomas J. Gough was thrice married. His first marriage, in 1825, was to Teresa Burch, daughter of ^{* Henry} Walter Burch ^{of Nelson Co. Ky}. She died in 1841, age 36 years, leaving two children: A) William H. and B) Susan Gough.

 Henry Burch and Walter Burch were brothers and from Charles Co ind settled Nelson Co Ky about 1799*

A) William H. Gough, born in 1826, became deputy sheriff of Meade county in 1849, and was elected the first sheriff of the county under the present constitution. After serving one term, he was engaged in farming until 1870, when he was elected to the office of county clerk, which position he held for about twenty years. He died in Brandenburg, where he had taken up his residence, in _____. His marriage to Mrs. Columbia Burch, widow of John H. Burch, and daughter of John F. Philpott and Emaline Hardin, took place in 1854. She died in _____, age _____ years.

B) Susan Gough, born in 1829, married Lewis L. Pullen in 1851.

(Who were his parents?

(When did Susan die?

(Who were their children, where did the Pullens live, etc.

Gough b

Shortly after the death of his wife Teresa in 1841, Thomas J. Gough married Agnes Burch, widow of Oliver Burch. No children were born of this union. She died in 1853, and near the end of the year, he married Christina McGill, daughter of (or widow of) _____ _____ ^{Born 1821}. She died in _____, age _____ years.

One child, Mary Christina was born to them about 1854. She married in 1873, J.M. Popham, likely the Martin Popham, son of Fielding D. Popham and Juliana Mills, who Popham, 7/6 was born in 1853 and died in _____. She passed away in _____.

(NOTE - No further records - where did they live?)

Back to marriage records

2) MATILDA GOUGH, born about 1807, married Edward A. Stewart in ~~1828 or 1829~~ ¹⁸²⁹. She was born in 1803 and died in 1881. She passed away in ^{6-13-1857 age 40} _____. Their children were: A) Mary Ellen, B) John Cornelius, C) ^{Elizabeth} Lizzie Rebecca, D) Cecilia Winifred, E) Francis Aloysius, F) Edward D., G) William Walter, H) Henry Flavius, I) Susan Isabel, J) Joseph S. (or L), and K) Charles Vitalis Stewart.

A) Mary Ellen Stewart, born in 1830, married Joseph Cody, probably of the Hardinsburg Codys, in 1850. He died in _____, age _____ years. She passed away in _____. (Where? _____) Their children were: a) Susan Ellen, b) William Finnely, c) James C., d) Matilda M., e) Joseph H., and f) Paul Cody.

a) Susan Ellen Cody, born in 1851, married Paul E. Buren, (Ferrin son of Edward Buren and Honora M. Brown, in 1866. He ^{p. 11/30} 1130 was born in Brandenburg in 1842. After residing in Greensburg, Bowling Green, and Louisville, he returned with his parents to Meade county ^{m 1857}. Until his death in 1911, he conducted a general store at _____. His wife, Susan Ellen died in _____. Their children were:

Mary H. Buren, born in 1867,

Laura Celestine Buren, born in 1870, married Daniel O'Connell O'Bryan, in 1899.

Francis Eugene Buren, born in 1872, married Augusta
Mattingly, in 1895.

Edward Chester Buren, born in 1874, married Mary Troutman, in 1898.

Joseph Ernest Buren, born in 1877, married Mary Inez Tyler, in 1904. Their son, Thomas E. Buren, was ordained priest in the Archdiocese of Louisville, in 1941.

Catherine I. Buren, born in 1879,

Simon Caye Buren, born in 1882, married Ann Catherine
Mattingly, in 1902.

Charles Emil Buren, born in 1885,

(1) Charles H. Cody, born in 1851, died in 1908

b) William Fennelly Cody, born in 1852,
Charles H. Cody, born in 1851, died in 1908

c) James C. Cody, born in 1855

d) Matilda M. Cody, born in 1856

e) Joseph H. Cody, born in 1858

f) Paul Cody, born in 1867.

(NOTE - no further records - where did the Codys reside?)

B) John Cornelius Stewart, born in 1832

C) Elizabeth Rebecca Stewart, born in 1835

D) Cecilia Winifred Stewart, born in 1836, died in 1837

E) Francis Aloysius Stewart, born in 1838

F) Edward Dickson Stewart, born in 1840

G) William Walter Stewart, born in 1842, married Mary Jane Mills, daughter of James Mills and Sarah Ann Brown, in 1865. She was born in 1849 and died in _____. He passed away in _____. (Where _____ Their children were: a) James E. ~~Stewart~~, b) William Albert, and c) Francis Marion Stewart.

a) James E. Stewart, born in ~~1865~~ 1869

b) William Albert Stewart, born in 1875

c) Francis Marion Stewart, born in 1877.

(NOTE - where did they reside or move to _____)

H) Henry Flavius Stewart, born in 1845, married Nancy L. Brown, daughter of _____, in 1866. She died in _____. He died in _____. (Where _____)

Their children were: a) Edward Dunston, b) Joseph Floyd, and c) William Henry Stewart.

a) Edward Dunston Stewart, born in 1871

b) Joseph Floyd Stewart, born in 1873

c) William Henry Stewart, born in 1875

I) Susan Isabel Stewart, born in 1847, married Joseph Henry Beaven, son of Walter Beaven and Nancy _____, in 1867. He was born in 1844, and died in _____. She passed away in _____ (Where _____) Their children were: a) James C., b) Edward Owen, c) Robert Celestine, and d) Joseph Henry Beavin.

- a) James C. Beavin, born in 1869
- b) Edward Owen Beavin, born in 1871
- c) Robert Celestine Beaven, born in 1874
- d) Joseph Henry Beaven, born in 1876

(NOTE - where did this family reside _____)

J) Joseph L. or S (Lionis) Stewart, born in 1849

K) Charles Vitalis Stewart, born in 1852 did not live to 6-8-1853 age 2

3) SUSAN GOUGH, born in 1809, married John Henry Manning, son of John Manning and Ann Gough, about 1827. He was born in 1807 and died in 1845. She died in 1842. (Cf. Manning, John - Manning, John Henry)

4) WILLIAM H. GOUGH, born about 1814, died in 1842, married Susan Mahala Burch, ^{daughter} ~~sister~~ of Oliver Burch, ^{and Lucinda Davis} in 1833. She died in _____, age _____ years. Their children were: A) Jane Catherine, B) William Henry, Jr., C) Benedict Joseph, D) Teresa Ellen, E) Lucinda, and F) John Chilton Gough.

A) Jane Catherine Gough, born in 1834, married James H. Elder, in 1853. ~~He~~ She died in _____. She passed away in _____ (where _____) Their children were: a) Mary Ellen, and b) Susan Elder.

a) Mary Ellen Elder, born in 1855

b) Susan Elder, born in 1856

gough f

B) William Henry Gough, Jr., born in 1836

married

Agnes C. Kerrick daughter of Emeline Kerrick Schofield in 1879 *made to will bk

B.*

C) Benedict Joseph Gough, born in 1837, married Julia M. Fenwick, in 1865, likely the Julia Fenwick, daughter of Benedict Fenwick and Caroline Burns, who was born in 1841. He died in _____. She passed away in _____. Where _____.

D) Teresa Ellen Gough, born in 1839

E) Lucinda Gough, born in 1840

F) John Chilton Gough, born in 1842

5) ELIZA (ELIZABETH) G. GOUGH, born in 1815, died in 1835.

6) THERESA GOUGH, born in 1817, died in 1835.

7) CECILIA GOUGH, born in 1820, died in 1835

Legend for "old to Theresa in made to my."

The Filson Historical Society

Dear Father:

RE: Chronicle of St. Mary's Co., Md. Vol 5, No. 1, January, 1957

My notes: "James Gough of Scott Co., Ky. (lived very close to Newton, Md.) married 1796 Mrs. Nancy (Lynch) Price, widow of Robert Price of St. Inigos Dist. St. Mary's Co., Md. James Gough was uncle of Joe, Stephen, Peter and Ben Gough.

John B. Gough, son of James Gough married a Medley as did Jeremiah Tarleton, two sisters."

I do not know when James Gough and his son John Baptist Gough first arrived in Scott Co. but they were both on the 1792 Scott Co., Ky. tax list.

Father Badin's letter of August 24, 1796 to Bishop Carroll places James Gough in Baltimore, Maryland in March 1797. I have found a St. Mary's Co., Md. marriage record dated ? - ? - 1797 James Gough and Nancy Price. She was his 2nd wife.

Do you have any records that might help identify this Medley family? I do not know if ? Medley was 1st or 2nd wife of John Baptist Gough. My great grandmother, Mariah (Gough) Greenwell (1799-1783) was born in Scott Co., Ky. and appears to be his eldest child.

It is just possible Joe, Stephen, Peter and Ben Gough were sons of Ignatius Gough who lived for a time in Scott Co., Ky. but died in Hardin Co., Ky. 8-8-1838 age about 86. He applied for Rev War benefits while living in Breckenridge Co., Ky. At that time (1833) he had two living sisters both in Nelson Co., Ky. Ann Howard and Susan Montgomery.

May 6, 1972
Mrs. Oscar W. Wagner
8400 Glaser Road
Fern Creek, Kentucky 40291

See Sealar, James Hallie in a book, James Gough

REMINISCENCES

A TRIP TO KENTUCKY

by J. Edwin Coad

Sometime in September 1860, I went to Kentucky to see after some blooded stock I had there. I had a friend, James W. Combs, then living in Louisville, but now, near Fredericktown, Washington Co., and, as soon as I could after reaching the city named, I dispatched a note to him saying I could be found at the Galt House, to which he responded in double quick time, for I was direct from his old home place. He took me along with him to hunt up Ned Greenwell (brother of Gusty and French) and, when we had found him my young friend said, "now the first thing in order, for us to do, is to conduct you up to see an excellent old man here from our county of St. Mary's who never fails to give us a terrible scolding, if anybody come here from that locality and we fail to take the party to see the old gentleman." Away we went, my two friends showering questions at me as thick as hail about friends and acquaintances in the old mother county, and after a walk of some ten minutes, we reached the residence of their old friend, Mr. John Price. He was a jolly and venerable looking man, and when he heard my name, he repeated it over several times and then said, "that name is very familiar to me, are you from St. Mary's county, Md?" I told him I was, and he asked what relation I was to Mr. Joe C., he used to know many years before. When informed that the party named was my grandfather the old man seemed overjoyed to meet me. Then it was his time to ask about persons in the fatherland remembered by him, but of all he mentioned, there were but three living at the time, the late H.G.S. Key, Esqr., Col. Cornelius Combs and Mr. Nace Thompson. A shadow of sorrow rested upon the old gentleman's face, when I had to tell him that so many friends he would call for were at rest in their graves. How natural that he should be sad, as my experience has taught me, since I too, have grown old. I will now give his own words in answer to inquiries from me as I take them from my notes. "My name is John Price, and I was born March 25th, 1787, in St. Inigo's district, St. Mary's Co., Md. My father was Robert Price and my mother's maiden name, was Nancy Lynch who had a brother, Barton Lynch. Father had a brother, John Price, who stuttered, was a pilot, as was my father. My uncle John engaged in smuggling coffee and had to leave home for a time. His real estate was confiscated, but he compromised with the government, returned and made a fortune. I went once from Lexington to Baltimore horseback, in 13 days, the best time ever made. I learned the saddler's trade, under good old Mr. Jenkins, of Baltimore. James Gough, who lived very close to Newtown, married my widowed mother, and he was the uncle of Joe, Stephen, Peter and Ben Gough. He was an excellent man and a Catholic, while my mother, was hers, an Episcopalian. He tried to raise me up in his religion, and my mother, in hers, and between the two, be d--n if they didn't make me nothing. James Combs came out with us in '96, and has sons and daughters now living in Scott Co. Tet Fenwick, Joe, Cornelius, Nace and Wim Fenwick went to Missouri. My father and Uncle Barton Lynch are buried at Newtown. Jno. William Price, Judge of the 4th district of La. (New Orleans) is my son. He read law with Story and Greenleaf and was by Story when he died." I chatted with this very interesting old pioneer for a couple of hours or so, and left with no little regret. He asked me the day and hour when I proposed to leave Louisville and said he would go to the depot to see me off. He was there to meet me, and we had a continuation of our talk, chiefly about the old county he loved so well and her people, the far greater part of whom were in their graves. When the hour was near at hand for me to get in the car, I proposed that the old gentleman should join me in a glass of wine when he observed that he had not taken a drink of the kind for many years, but would not decline drinking with a man who was born where he was, and was going back to that old home of hospitality and noble hearted people. We touched our glasses, he said, "God bless ye, young man", his eyes filled up with tears that would not down, had he bidden them, we shook hands and we parted to meet no more in this world, at least.

I am sure my feelings were nearly as much stirred up as were his to witness his deep emotions and the evidences the tears offered as they rolled down beneath his venerable brows. From Louisville I went to Georgetown to make inquiries about some relatives of the late Col. C. Combs who had emigrated to that section when the great exodus took place from this county in the latter years of the past century. I was conducted to the chief hotel of Georgetown and asked the landlord to inform me if there were any people there of Maryland stock and was advised to go see a Mr. George Allgaier, a Harwarre merchant of the town who had married a widow Gough whose people had come from Maryland. I found Mr. Allgaier without trouble, who was very clever and expressed much regret that his wife had gone to the country to visit some friends. I was much disappointed at this news, as he was unable to give any very important information, of the kind I most wanted. I copy from my notes the following items, that may interest some.

"Melissa Gough, daughter of John Baptist Gough, and he was a some of the Jas. Gough who came here from Maryland, Ann Savilla Jenkins, daughter of Thomas C. Jenkins, and granddaughter of Jeremiah Tarleton, of Maryland, John B. Gough married a Medley, as did Jeremiah Tarleton, two sisters. Nealy Fenwick lived in Franklin Co., near Frankfort and died some 6 or 8 months ago, at near 100 years of Age. Maj. Sylvester, Robert and James Combs, some of the first James Combs, who came here are living in Monroe County Missouri, near the town of Clinton and went there from Scott County, Kentucky." It is fair to presume that the Combs family is about as numerous in that state, represented so long by the great Tom Benton in the U.S. Senate, as they are in our own county. After making an arrangement with Mr. Allgaier to send me down to Lexington in the afternoon, I returned to my hotel and enjoyed an excellent dinner just as good as Count Moore usually given his guests and every one here will infer that it was first class. When my hour for departing came, I sought the landlord and asked the amount of my bill and when he said 25 cents, I exclaimed in amazement, "great Scott! 25 cents, did you say?" His reply was, "yes, sir; it is 25 cents --- we formerly furnished dinner for 20 cents, but things are highter now than they used to be, and we are forced to charge more." "Great heavens, man" I replied, "I was not astenished at the bill's being so large, but at its smallness." I went straight from the hotel to my hardware friend, whose buggy was soon soon ready for me and a young man some seventeed years old held the reins and proposed to drive me down to John Clay's, a mile or so beyond Lexington. As we were jogging along at a good gait through Georgetown, I asked the young man his name, and when he answered, "Joe Gough", I was never more astonished in all my life. In about an hour and a half I was with Mr. Clay, who, upon hearing my name, gave me a most cordial reception and tooke me all through his fine stable of blooded horses, pausing at each and telling me his or her pedigree. After this, we went to the house and settled up accounts, which was the object of my visit and it was not more than half an hour or so, when he invited me in to tea, and introduced me to his aged mother, the widow of the great Commoner. When she learned I was from Md., she seemed to take particular interest in me, observing that she was from Md., and was reared in Hagerstown. After the meal was over she sat at the head of the table and washed up the things just as I had seen my own mother do so many ~~h~~ hundred thimes. She was a Miss Hart and first cousin of the celebrated Thomas Hart Benton, who nevertheless, had no love fer Mr. Clay and was in sympathy with that erratic genius, John Randolph, in his duel with Mr. Clay. I was earnestly invited to spend a night with my host, but I had to decline, as I wished to take the first train in the morning on my journey back to Md. My Clay had his old pet servant, john called, and he was ordered to hook up the buggy and take me to Lexington. He was a fine old colored man, very polite and full of talk. I had seen something in the papers about John Clay's making as attack on a trainer he had and asked Uncle John about it. The old man laughed and commenced by saying, "well, sir, he-thowed a race off for Marse John and he 'lowd he was gwine to shoot him fur it, the fust time he seed him, and some weeks after dat he seed de man a-goin into a barber shop in Lexington, and went right down in his pocket for his pistol. The man seed him and roached his back up like, wid his head down and started on a dead run in the shop, but Marse John pulled on him and the ball tuk right up his back bone and glanced off. The people around kept Marse John from following him up and the man didn't get kilt."

"After that what", I said? "Well, sir Marse John clared out from 'bout here for about a munt and the fuss was all fixed up and that trainer has eat breakfast at our house sense dat." I ventured that remark that my appetite would have been very slight in the house had I been the trainer. He made light of my remark and said, "you don't know Marse John well, sir, or you wouldn't say dat. If he gits mad wid a man and shoots at him wheder he hits or not his bile is all gone outen den." By the time the old man finished his narrative, we had reached Lexington and we parted company each looking towards home, sweet home.

The Filson Historical Society

Baltimore horseback, in 13 days, the best time ever made. I learned the saddler's trade, under good old Mr. Jenkins, of Baltimore. James Gough, who lived very close to Newtown, married my widowed mother, and he was the uncle of Joe, Stephen, Peter and Ben Gough. He was an excellent man and a Catholic, while my mother was an Episcopalian. He tried to raise me up in his religion, and my mother, in hers, and between the two, be d--n if they didn't make me nothing. James Combs came out with us in '96, and has sons and daughters now living in Scott Co. Tot Fenwick, Joe, Cornelius, Nace and Jim Fenwick went to Missouri. My father and Uncle Barton Lynch are buried at Newtown. Jno. William Price, Judge of the 4th district of La. (New Orleans) is my son. He read law with Story and Greenleaf and was by Story when he died." I chatted with this very interesting old pioneer for a couple of hours or so, and left with no little regret. He asked me the day and hour when I proposed to leave Louisville and said he would go to the depot to see me off. He was there to meet me, and we had a continuation of our talk, chiefly about the old county he loved so well and her people, the far greater part of whom were in their graves. When the hour was near at hand for me to get in the car, I proposed that the old gentleman should join me in a glass of wine when he observed that he had not taken a drink of the kind for many years, but would not decline drinking with a man who was born where he was, and was going back to that old home of hospitality and noble hearted people. We touched our glasses, he said, "God bless you, young man", his eyes filled up with tears that would not down, had he bidden them, we shook hands and we parted to meet no more in this world, at least. I am sure my feelings were nearly as much stirred up as were his to witness his deep emotions and the evidences the tears offered as they rolled down beneath his venerable brows. From Louisville I went to Georgetown to make inquiries about some relatives of the late Col. C. Combs who had emigrated to that section when the great exodus took place from this county in the latter years of the past century. I was conducted to the chief hotel of Georgetown and asked the landlord to inform me if there were any people there of Maryland stock and was advised to go see a Mr. George Allgaier, a hardware merchant of the town who had married a widow Gough whose people had come from Maryland. I found Mr. Allgaier without trouble, who was very clever and expressed much regret that his wife had gone to the country to visit some friends. I was much disappointed at this news, as he was unable to give any very important information, of the kind I most wanted. I copy from my notes the following items, that may interest some: "Melissa Gough, daughter of John Baptist Gough, and he was a son of the Jas. Gough who came here from Maryland, Ann Savilla Jenkins, daughter of Thomas C. Jenkins, and granddaughter of Jeremiah Tarleton, of Maryland, John B. Gough married a Medley, as did Jeremiah Tarleton, two sisters. Nealy Fenwick lived in Franklin Co., near Frankfort, and died some 6 or 8 months ago, at near 100 years of age. Maj. Sylvester, Robert and James Combs, sons of the first James Combs, who came here are living in Monroe County, Missouri, near the town of Clinton and went there from Scott county, Kentucky." It is fair to presume that the Combs family is about as numerous in that state, represented so long by the great Tom Benton in the U. S. Senate, as they are in our own county. After making an arrangement with Mr. Allgaier to send me down to Lexington in the afternoon, I returned to my hotel and enjoyed an excellent dinner just as good as Count Moore usually gives his guests and every one here will infer that it was first class. When my hour for departing came, I sought the landlord and asked the amount of my bill and when he said 25 cents, I exclaimed in amazement, "great Scott! 25 cents, did you say?" His reply was, "yes, sir; it is 25 cents -- we formerly furnished dinner for 20 cents, but things are higher now than they used to be, and we are forced to charge more." "Great heavens, man"! I replied, "I was not astonished at the bill's being so large, but at its smallness." I went straight from the hotel to my hardware friend, whose buggy was soon ready for me and a young man some seventeen years old held the reins and proposed to drive me down to John Clay's, a mile or so beyond Lexington. As we were jogging along at a good gait through Georgetown, I asked the young man his name, and when he answered, "Joe Gough", I was never more astonished in all my life. In about an hour and a half I was with Mr. Clay, who, upon hearing my name, gave me a most cordial reception and took me all through his fine stable of blooded horses, pausing at each and telling me his or her pedigree. After this, we went to the house and settled up accounts, which was the object of my visit and it was not more than half an hour or so, when he invited me in to tea, and introduced me to his aged mother, the widow of the great Commoner. When she learned I was from Md., she seemed to take particular interest in me, observing that she was from Md., and was reared in Hagerstown. After the meal was over she sat at the head of the table and washed up the things just as I had seen my own mother do so many hundred times. She was a Miss Hart and first cousin of the celebrated Thomas Hart Benton, who nevertheless, had no love for Mr. Clay and was in sympathy with that erratic genius, John Randolph, in his duel with Mr. Clay. I was earnestly invited to spend a night with my host, but I had to decline, as I wished to take the first train in the morning on my journey back to Md. Mr. Clay had his old pet servant, John, called, and he was ordered to hook up the buggy and take me to Lexington. He was a fine old colored man, very polite and full of talk. I had seen something in the papers about John Clay's making an attack on a trainer he had and asked Uncle John about it. The old man laughed and commenced by saying, "well, sir, he-thowed a race off for Marse John and he 'lowd he was gwine to shoot him fur it, the fust time he seed him, and some weeks after dat he seed de man a-goin into a barber shop in Lexington, and went right down in his pocket for his pistol. The man seed him and roached his back up like, wid his head down and started on a dead run in the shop, but Marse John pulled on him and the ball tuk right up his back bone and glanced off. The people around kept Marse John from following him up and the man didn't get kilt." "After that what", I said? "Well, sir, Marse John clared out from 'bout here for about a munt and the fuss was all fixed up and that trainer has eat breakfast at our house sence dat." I ventured the remark that my appetite would have been very slight in the house had I been the trainer. He made light of my remark and said, "you don't know Marse John well, sir, or you wouldn't say dat. If he gits mad wid a man and shoots at him wheder he hits or not his bile is all gone outen den." By the time the old man finished his narrative, we had reached Lexington and we parted company each looking towards home, sweet home.

Leonardtoun in 1846
by J. Edwin Coad

Some winters ago, after the evening meal was over and the juvenile member of the family had retired to their little beds, seated at my desk, I soon discovered that my mind was on a ramble and had found, for the time being a "local habitation and a home" in old Benedict Leonardtown, where I was reading law in the year of grace 1846. A suggestion presented itself to me to count up the number of male adults who were residing in the town when I was there as a student. With pencil and paper before me, I commenced the self-imposed task and in half an hour or so I had jotted down forty-five names. The next idea that naturally presented itself, was to mark off the dead and see how many remained among the living. These

Father:

Keep this for your records.
Research far from complete.

Mrs. Oscar W. Wagner
8400 Glaser Road
Fern Creek, Kentucky 40291

The Filson Historical Society

James Gough
8-5-1748
9-27-1826
St. Pius Now St. Francis Scott Co., Ky.

1st m.

Susanna _____
8-15-1746
7-13-1795
St. Pius, Scott Co., Ky.

2nd m.

Ann Gough:
~~4-22-1768~~
1-7-1814
St. Pius, Scott Co., Ky.

Proved: James Gough made a trip to Baltimore, Md. 1797

Proved 1. John Baptist Gough *
2-29-1767
2-19-1839
St. Pius, Scott Co., Ky.

1st m.

Mary _____ 1778
6-16-1809
St. Pius, Scott Co., Ky.

2nd m. Scott Co., Ky. before 3-30-1811

Mrs. Sarah (?) Clarvo
b.
d.
widow of Henry Clarvo
1775 d. 5-1-1808
St. Pius, Scott Co., Ky.

Proved 2. _____ Gough *
b. d.

m.

James Leak
b.
d.

Lived site of White Sulphur Springs, Scott Co., Ky.
Moved to Missouri.

3. Cornelius Gough *
b.
d. 1833
St. Theresa, Rhodelia
Meade Co., Ky.

m.

Winifred _____ 1782
1837 age 55 yrs.
St. Theresa, Rhodelia
Meade Co., Ky.

Must have lived Breckenridge Co. near Meade Co., line.
St. Theresa parish divided - half in Breck. half in Meade.

Proved 4. James Gough, Jr.
2-14-1775
5-24-1828 St. Pius

m.

Rebecca _____

He had been named Ex. of his father's estate
James Gough's Sr. estate settled with Rebecca, widow of James Gough, Jr.

Proved 5. Ann Gough *
1778
12-30-1836 age 58
St. Theresa, Rhodelia
Meade Co., Ky.

m. before 1796

John (Henry ?) Manning
1775
10-21-1835
St. Theresa, Rhodelia
Meade Co., Ky.

John B. Gough
2-29-1767
2-19-1839
St. Pius, Scott Co., Ky.

1st m.

Mary 1778
6-16-1809
St. Pius, Scott Co., Ky.

2nd m.
About 1811

Mrs. Sarah (?) Clarvo, (widow of Henry Clarvo d.1808)

Scott Co., Deed Book P, p. 438/9, 8226-1839
Sarah Gough sold her dower to 6 heirs of John B. Gough.

1. Mariah Gough
1799
7-10-1873 7 $\frac{1}{4}$ yrs, 2 $\frac{1}{4}$ days
St. Theresa, Rhodelia
Meade Co., Ky.

m. about 1814

Benedict Greenwell
9-14-1790 son of Bennet Greenwell
6-2-1875
St. Theresa, Rhodelia
Meade Co., Ky.

2. Cecelia Gough
7-19-1801
12-1-1828
St. Pius, Scott Co., Ky.

2nd wife of
m. about 1818

Barnaby Worland
3 children: John Henry Worland
Mary G. Worland
James Guy Worland

3. Melissa Gough
b. d.

m.

George Allgair
b.
d.

lived Georgetown, Scott Co., Ky.

4. Catherine Gough
b.
d. about 1823

m. 2-23-1821
Lexington, Ky.

John Middleton Worland

died without issue

5. Matilda Gough
8-14-1808
5-2-1888
St. Theresa, Rhodelia
Meade Co., Ky.

1st m. about 1825
2nd m. Meade Co., Ky
1-5-1836

Samuel Manning
b. son of John Manning
d. Ann Gough
Stephen T. Burch
11-25-1808 son of Henry Burch
11-6-1884
St. Theresa, Rhodelia
Meade Co., Ky.

6. James R. Gough
b.
d.

m. Scott Co., Ky.
8-31-1839

Mary Combs
b.
d.

7. Benedict Gough

m. Prob. Scott Co.
1839

Ann R.

6. Ignatius Gough	m. 1812	Susan Beavin
3-28-1784		7-13-1793
3-25-1825		5-6-1864
St. Pius, Scott Co., Ky.		Old Clinton Cemetery Monroe Co., Missouri

her 2nd. m. James C. McAtee

Page 984

History of Monroe and Shelby Co., Missouri 1884.

7. Allouisa M. Gough *	2nd wife of	Bennet Greenwell (no wife signed
11-28-1784		12-7-1761 4-11-1808)
5-8-1842	m. Scott Co., Ky.	7-12-1838
St. Pius, Scott Co., Ky.	about 1809	St. Pius, Scott Co., Ky.

8 Julia Ann Gough *	1st m.	George S. Hunter
1785		b.
2-1-1863		d.
78 yrs, 4 mo, 11 days
St. Theresa, Rhodelia	2nd m.	Henry S. Greenwell
Meade Co., Ky.		b. 1775/80
		d. 1838 Meade Co., Ky.

9. Eliza Gough *	m.	George W. Tarlton
b.		b.
d.		d.

There were probably other children

* Settlement of James Gough, Sr.'s estate showed substantial cash amounts (per receipts).