Hi Beverley -

The interviews were conducted in 1863-1864 by the American Freedmen's Inquiry Commission, which was part of the Army. Their purpose was to interview, throughout the South and the border states, former slaves, free blacks, army officers, etc. to develop reconstruction policy after the war ended. This was not the same group as the Freedmen's Bureau, which operated banks, schools, etc.

These interviews are available only on microfilm from the National Archives. There is a list of all interviewees, with their locations, before the interviews begin. It doesn't take too long to go through them, if you want to come in and make copies. I'll be happy to show you how to find them on the film.

Hello Pen: Carolyn Brooks said that you had found on a Freedmans Bureau CD, interviews with James and Joshua about slavery. Can you tell me how to purchase the CD? I have the new Freedman's Bank Records CD, but there are no interviews that I'm aware of on there. Does the CD that has James and Joshua also have interviews of other former owners of slaves, e.g. Mississippi? Thank you very much. Beverley Ballantine

"Celia an infant, [died] a few weeks since"

Deposition of James Speed, 31 December 1840, Circuit Court Case 2823

"Bartlett was sold by your orator for the sum of $575.00 - your orator sold said negro boy because both he and the family had good grounds to suspect that he (Bartlett) had set fire to a part of the hemp factory - your orator sold him, to be taken from the State and for as much as he would bring under the circumstances - Your orator then thought and still believes, that it was his duty to dispose of Bartlett"
