Cabbage Patch Settlement House (Louisville, Ky.)
Records, 1906-2019

Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of the records of Louisville's Cabbage Patch Settlement House (CPSH), founded in 1910. Dating from 1906 to 2019, the collection includes administrative and financial records, program participation records, fundraising materials, publications, newspaper clippings, oral histories, promotional videos, and the professional and personal papers of CPSH founder Louise Marshall. Records document the management, services, and finances of a charitable, privately funded Christian organization. In addition, the collection provides information about the children, teenagers, and families who participated in the Cabbage Patch's programs.

Folders 1-96 contain administrative records such as Board of Directors minutes from 1912-1992, correspondence about past and prospective CPSH employees from 1927-1951, and general correspondence from 1910-1980.

Folders 97-109 consist of materials from 1918-1981 relating to Louise Marshall, including her passports, correspondence, legal documents, and invitations and cards for her 90th birthday.

Folders 110-144 hold CPSH organizational records from 1910-1983, including articles of incorporation, legal records and copyright material, reports to religious organizations, building funds and plans, and amended by-laws.

Unfolded index cards in boxes 6-26 date from 1925-1951 and are arranged alphabetically. They list participation of families and individuals in Cabbage Patch programs and activities. Family cards include names and occasionally birthdates for all members of a family. Individual cards regularly include the individual's name, address, and clubs attended; they sometimes include birth date, parents' names, and church attended. All names listed on individual cards should be found on family cards.

Folders 145-163a contain staff reports to the board from 1914-1981 and staff meeting minutes from 1960. Staff reports were early on written by a resident worker and then by director Louise Marshall. They shed light on staffing, offerings, and functioning of CPSH.

Folders 164-200 consist of statistical material from 1921-1994, mostly attendance records but also CPSH reports and University of Louisville Institute of Community Development surveys. These records document CPSH programs and list names of individuals involved in or leading activities. The file "Individual Count" is a compilation of number of individuals served by CPSH from 1922-May 1971. "Monthly Attendance Records" and "Reports" from 1922-1980 consist of formally-compiled numbers of attendance at different CPSH programs and statistics on work done by CPSH; these were probably presented to the Board. The files on "Statistical Material" (also called "Group Work Statistics") from 1914-1980 provide more detailed information about who attended CPSH offerings. "Monthly Staff Reports" from 1973-1980 are tallies of staff duties and document names of CPSH staff members. Finally, "Miscellaneous Reports" include a listing of staff visits and office visits from 1949-1950 (similar to "Monthly Staff Reports" from the 1970s), a compilation of attendance tallies from 1937-1941, and a "facts" tally from 1994. University of Louisville Institute of Community Development survey materials from 1980-1983 garnered opinions of people in the Cabbage Patch neighborhood to assist CPSH in long-range planning. The surveys did not collect names or addresses.

Folders 201-236 hold ephemera and miscellaneous materials from 1906-2016 related to Cabbage Patch Settlement House and Louise Marshall. Materials include newspaper clippings on the Cabbage Patch, its activities, and former attendees. Records on the history of CPSH include a paper written on the history of The Patch by Keith Cardwell; historical sketches from the 1930s-1970s; leaflets with information about name changes, activities, and juvenile delinquency; and highlighted material from board minutes used for the 1993 publication "The story of the Cabbage Patch Settlement House as told by those who lived it." Professional and personal documents of Louise Marshall include writings, interviews, awards, class notes, and a diary. Also of note is a collection of memorabilia from Marshall's time as a Red Cross volunteer in France after World War I, including official documents, correspondence, notes and poetry written to Marshall by soldiers (mainly a "Bjorn Winger"), keepsakes from hotels, plays, and shops, and photographs.

Folders 237-402 consist of financial records from 1912-1980, including cash ledgers, check stub books, annual audits, financial reports, and information on donor gifts, securities, and trust funds. Cash ledgers detail expenditures by different departments of the CPSH and note prices for various goods such as food and clothing. Professional audit reports document the CPSH's operating costs through receipts and disbursements for each year. In the 1930s and 1940s, many of the audit report folders include additional information, such as budget information, ledger sheets, applications, leaflets, or correspondence (material likely gathered for reports that CPSH owed annually to the Civic and Welfare Endorsement Committee of the Louisville Board of Trade). Materials related to the Fanny S. Butler Fund (1936-1960) show what a tough negotiator Louise Marshall was, as she fought with the executor over the will.

Folders 403-478 hold CPSH publications, primarily appeal letters and newsletters, ca. 1911-1996. Newsletters include Heart of the Cabbage Patch News (1960-1967, 1971), The Bugle (1974-1976, 1978-1979, 1981); The Cabbage Patch Alumni (1991); Patch-Work (1992); Patch Poets (1995); and summer camp newsletters (1996). For fundraising letters and newsletters published after 2007, see folders 1615-1622.

Folders 479-786 document CPSH recreational and educational activities from 1911-1985, with many records tracking attendance. The records on gym and game room attendance include folders on "Negro Program gym attendance, 1959-1962." Records provide information about CPSH athletic activities, summer camps, and camps-on-tour to such places as Washington, D.C., and the Grand Canyon. Other organizational activities include a sewing school, teenage clubs, vacation Bible school, and Junior Optimist Club. Records for a nursery school that provided day care consist of correspondence, attendance records, menus, and expenses.

Folders 787-1468 contain materials relating to the Cabbage Patch's social ministries from 1924-1982. Included is information about Christmas baskets and gifts that CPSH delivered to families from 1924-1987, and health record cards and records for individual and well-baby clinics from 1925-1943. Records document programs during the Great Depression, such as clothing leagues and a commissary with cards listing items purchased, visitors, and daily registration. Records for the Cabbage Patch unemployment relief bureau include family files, correspondence, employer lists, monthly reports, fairs and garden reports, and financial records. Later relief bureau records from 1959-1982 include home visits and family files.

Folders 1469-1473 hold transcripts of oral histories conducted in 1987, as well as transcripts of a 1974 interview with Louise Marshall and a 2002 interview with longtime employee Roosevelt Chin. For original cassette tape recordings and other interviews, see Record Group IX: Audio/Visual and Digital Materials.

Folders 1474-1498 consist of records of the Cabbage Patch Circle, a volunteer and fundraising group affiliated with the CPSH. Materials date from 1911-2007 and include histories, newspaper clippings, organizational and financial records, Club House records, board minutes and correspondence, bazaar/luncheon/auction information, and a published recipe book.

Audio/visual items 1499-1613 include audiocassette recordings of interviews with Louise Marshall and other individuals associated with CPSH, a 1952 audio recording of Louise Marshall receiving the "Golden Rule Award," film recordings of summer camps and trips from the 1960s, an audiocassette recording of Roosevelt Chin's funeral in 2007, and promotional videos from the early 2000s.

Digital materials include PDF files of Louise Marshall's 1906-1907 diary, Jim Cooksey's 1971 interview with Marshall, promotional images from 2001, and a video recording of speeches at Rod Napier's retirement party in 2019.

Folders 1614-1623 contain materials accessioned after 2017 and dating from 1988-2019, such as annual reports, promotional and fundraising materials, newsletters, and information about educational programs, the Seed to Table program, and the annual Cabbage Patch auction and golf tournament.

Historical Note

Louise Marshall, founder of the Cabbage Patch Settlement House, was born in Louisville in 1888. Louise and her family resided in the Old Louisville neighborhood and attended Second Street Presbyterian church. As a teenager, Louise began teaching and working with neighborhood boys; her friends also volunteered, and a program was opened for girls as well. They had a story hour, a mother's club, and a sewing school – all in one room.

In 1910, Louise established a settlement house with the help of her community, church, and family. With a loan from her father, Louise purchased a lot on Ninth Street near Burnett. In October 1910, the facility became a not-for-profit corporation with the name Cabbage Patch Settlement House (CPSH). Named for the Louisville neighborhood where it was originally established, the Cabbage Patch was formed in the spirit of Christian love as a safe place for neighborhood children to play, grow, and learn.

The Cabbage Patch neighborhood was located along the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, south of Broadway. During the Civil War era, railroads penetrated the farmland and industrial development began, creating a rural-industrial combination of truck gardens and shop workers living around them. Following the creation of the affluent areas of St. James and Belgravia Courts after the Southern Exposition of the 1880s, wealth inequality typified the neighborhood.

The Cabbage Patch at 1461 S. Ninth Street offered services such as a library, Bible study, a well-baby clinic, a nursery, and a gymnasium. In 1929, the CPSH moved to its current location at 1413 S. Sixth Street. During the Great Depression, the CPSH ran a commissary, offered a job program for unemployment relief, and partnered with the Kentucky Birth Control League to sponsor a maternal health clinic. In the 1950s, the CPSH began to allow African American children to participate in its recreational activities. Marshall remained involved with the Cabbage Patch until her death in 1981.

The mission of the Cabbage Patch Settlement House (ca. 1993) is “to serve those of our community in need, in the spirit of Christian Love. . . . These needs include: the spiritual, physical, social, emotional, moral, and educational.” From its founding and continuing into the 2000s, the organization has not accepted government funding, relying instead on private donors, fundraising events, and earnings from investments and endowments.
