Engineers and Architects Club of Louisville
Records, 1891-1985

Scope and Content Note

The records of the Engineers and Architects Club of Louisville consist of membership records ranging from the late nineteenth century through the mid-1980s. The records contain applications for membership, letters of acceptance, correspondence related to payment of dues, and letters of resignation. In addition, the collection consists of financial and tax records from 1937-1985. Also included in the collection are meeting minutes, meeting notices, general correspondence, and correspondence with other scientific societies. Two membership pins included with the collection were transferred to the museum.

Historical Note

The Engineers and Architects Club of Louisville was founded in 1891 as an organization to unite professional engineers and architects within the city. The club held monthly meetings, invited guest speakers to lecture on relevant topics, took educational group fieldtrips, and encouraged a high level of professionalism among its members. In order to provide its members with a quality service, the Club formed professional associations with numerous other scientific societies and organizations, including the University of Louisville's Speed Scientific School, the Louisville Engineering and Scientific Societies' Council, the Kentucky State Board of Registration for Professional Engineers, and various state scientific societies.
