Scope and Content Note

This collection documents the creative and collaborative act of songwriting and the business side of music publishing through the records of a bluegrass music publishing company based in Franklin, Tennessee and owned by Dixie Hall. The bulk of the collection consists of eight cubic feet of song files alphabetically arranged at the folder level by song title. Folder labels list the songwriters in order of their contribution. Fifty-one songwriters are represented in the song folders, including Dixie Hall, Tom T. Hall, Troy Engle, William “Billy” P. Smith, Paul Humphrey, Michelle Nixon, Jeffrey Orr, and Heather Berry. The song files include typed and handwritten song lyric drafts, CDs and WAV files of demo and release audio recordings, and some correspondence with songwriters and record labels. The bulk of the files document Good Home Grown Music’s publishing activities, as documented by United States copyright registration forms, publishing agreements, work registration with BMI, and licensing reports from the Harry Fox Agency. Correspondence and mechanical licenses document the company’s interaction with over fifty American, Canadian, and English record labels. Lyric drafts and a rare ca. 2010 recording of Dixie Hall singing with co-writer Troy Engle a working run through of the song “You Go Girl” document her writing process. The collection documents Dixie Hall’s concern for receiving credit for her songwriting, as evident in handwritten corrections of the order of co-writers on mechanical licenses and typed final song lyrics. Letters and emails document Dixie Hall’s support of female songwriters and musicians.

The collection also contains four binders of compiled song records. The binders document some songs that are not represented in the individual song folders. Two binders, one organized alphabetically by artist and the other by song title, hold logs of the songs artists recorded and to whom Dixie Hall pitched songs. The remaining two binders are organized alphabetically by song title and contain typed lyrics and printed database entries for each song. The database entries include the names of songwriters, who recorded demos, whether or not songwriter contracts were signed, copyright information, registration numbers and clearance dates, dates and names for whom and when songs were pitched, and recording information.

CDs within the song files and a USB drive hold demo and release audio files of 343 songs published by Good Home Grown Music. The collection audio-visual inventory provides item level information on the 17.3 GB of audio files, including song title, recording artist, and date of creation.

BMI clearance forms, working registration forms, and single song publishing agreements contain sensitive personal information and are currently restricted.

Historical Note

Dixie Hall founded the bluegrass song publishing company Good Home Grown Music in 1998 in Franklin, Tennessee. The company published Hall's songs, songs she co-wrote, and songs by other bluegrass songwriters. She opened the studio at her (and husband Tom T. Hall's) Tennessee estate, Fox Hollow, to artists who recorded the company's songs. Hall pitched her songs to artists through letters, email, phone calls, and in person. She promoted the company at bluegrass festivals and the International Bluegrass Music Association Business Conference. Hall used her company to support women in bluegrass music, particularly through the publishing of female songwriters and release of the Daughters of Bluegrass box sets.

Biographical Note

"Miss Dixie" Hall was born Iris Violet May Lawrence in Birmingham, England, in 1934. American country and western movies kindled her interest in country music and horses as a child. Under the name Dixie Dean, she began her music business career in England by promoting Tex Ritter and Bill Clifton and the Dixie Mountain Boys to record labels, and writing for Country And Western Express. She moved to the United States in 1961 to take a promotion and publicity job with Starday Records in Nashville. Dean befriended and lived with Maybelle Carter and her family in Madison, Tennessee. She gained early experience managing a music publishing company by starting Flatt & Scrugg Music with Louise Scruggs. At Music City News, Dean rose from a general office worker to writer and editor. Dixie married country songwriter and musician Tom T. Hall in 1964 and stepped back from her career in the music industry. In the late 1990s, Miss Dixie returned to commercial songwriting and publishing after her husband retired from touring. She founded the bluegrass publishing company Good Home Grown Music and record label Blue Circle Records in 1998. She was diagnosed with a brain tumor in 2014 and died January 16, 2015. Musicians made over 500 recordings of Miss Dixie's songs during her lifetime, distinguishing her as the most recorded female bluegrass songwriter of all time.
