Scope and Content Note

This collection is comprised of records relating to the business activities of Ulysses P. Schenck, a merchant and entrepreneur in Vevay, Indiana.

Folders 1-49 contain correspondence and miscellaneous documents.

Folders 50-537 contain bills of lading and receipts for the many steamboats Schenck operated on the Ohio River in the mid-to-late 1800s. The steamers most prominently represented in the collection are the Wisconsin (operated 1845-1849), Wisconsin No. 2 (operated 1849-1862), Express, and Winfield Scott. Other notable boats include the Switzerland, which served as a Union gunboat during the Civil War, and the self-named U. P. Schenck, a massive steamer built in 1876 for trade between Cincinnati and New Orleans. Other steamboats represented in this collection include: Allegheny Clipper, Anne Livingston, Argosy, Cincinnati, Consul, Emma Dean, General Pike, Genesee, Hoosier State, Jacob Strader, Jewess, Lady Pike, Madison Belle, Mary Pell, Messenger No. 2, North River, Ohio, Pontiac, R. M. Patton, Statesman, Summit, Swamp Fox, Swiftsure No. 4, Telegraph No. 2, and others.

Volumes 538-631 are other types of steamboat records, including ledgers and receiving, delivery, and memorandum books.

Volumes 632-856 are records of business conducted in Schenck's general store, U.P. Schenck & Son, in Vevay. These include ledgers, sales books, price books, and account books. The records continue into the 20th century, after the store was purchased from the Schencks by Americus Danner and became Danner's Hardware Store.

Folder 857 contains oversized broadsides and advertisements.

Volumes 858-879 are other records concerning steamboat operations and the store.

Biographical Note

Ulysses P. Schenck (1811-1884)

Ulysses P. Schenck was born in the Canton of Neuchatel, Switzerland on May 16, 1811. His parents, John J. P. and Matilda Schenck came to the United States in 1817 and moved to a farm in Switzerland County above Vevay, Indiana. Schenck obtained a common school education and worked as a clerk for his father in Louisville, Kentucky before starting his own business in Louisville, which he operated for eight years. On September 21, 1830, he married Justine Thiebaud [Thoebaud], whose family was among the early settlers of Vevay. They had eleven children.

During the panic of 1837, the couple moved from Louisville to Vevay, in part because they believed the rural surroundings would help stabilize their business. There the Schencks opened a general store in a wooden building on the corner of Ferry and Pike Streets. Justine, a seamstress with a knack for picking out fashionable materials that appealed to their customers, became Ulysses's partner in operating the store.

The first building to house the store was small, with business conducted on the first floor and the Schenck family living on the second floor. But in 1838, the Schencks constructed a new building, a large and impressive edifice that local residents took to calling the "mammoth" Schenck Store. The brick Italianate structure measured 40 by 100 feet, stood three stories high, contained a full basement, and featured a two-story brick warehouse attached to the main building.

Inside, Schenck sold groceries, hardware, glass, clothing, shoes, china, and other goods. He attempted to meet consumer demand whenever possible, stocking his shelves with the latest in patent medicines, syrup for teething children, and medicinal herbs. Instead of relying on middlemen to buy East Coast products, he personally traveled to Boston, Philadelphia, and New York at least once a year. In the 1840s, the general store also began carrying luxuries such as silk, American prints, muslin, linen, combs, cotton balling, wallpaper, cutlery, castings, tea, coffee, and molasses. In the mid-1870s, the store began selling farm implements, including mowers, reapers, and rakes.

Schenck also operated a steamboat shipping enterprise, which he started in 1846 with his brother Julius P. Schenck, a riverboat captain. This venture enabled Schenck to expand the store's dry goods and grocery sections with goods traded from Southern markets, particularly New Orleans.

One of the materials he was especially known for transporting was hay. He was known as the “Hay King” and could transport more than nine million pounds of the material in a single season. In the 1850s, Julius and Ulysses Schneck’s fleet of ten flatboats and five steamships carried numerous products to New Orleans, including beer, bacon, live animals, skins, com, and metal tools. In the late 1850s, the brothers started a private mail line that operated until the beginning of the Civil War. During the war, their fleet was purchased by the Union navy and Julius retired, putting an end the brothers’ partnership. After the war, Ulysses again became involved in the shipping business, a line continued by his son until 1893.

Over the years, Schenck operated many other business ventures. In 1864, he and several Vevay businessmen launched the First National Bank to serve the financial needs of the community. The bank operated from directly across the street from the Schenck’s store, and Ulysses held the post of bank president until his death. In 1872, Schenck created the Union Furniture Store, which shipped goods to countries throughout the world. He was also one of the principals in the construction of the Versailles Turnpike and donated large sums to Franklin College, a Baptist institution of which he was trustee for several years. Schenck died on November 16, 1884.

Andrew Jackson Schenck (1842-1908)

Ulysses Schenck’s son, Andrew Jackson Schenck, was born December 28, 1842 and completed his education at Franklin College. In July 1864, he joined his father’s business, and the name of the store changed to U. P. Schenck & Son. From 1865 to 1875, he worked on his father’s steamships, first as steward and later as a captain. In 1875, he took over management of the general store and, upon Ulysess Schenck’s death in 1884, inherited his father’s businesses. Like his father, Andrew directed the national bank, the furniture store, and a woolen mill company. Andrew died on June 16, 1908.

Americus Vespuccius Danner (1867-1952)

In 1897, Americus Vespuccius Danner, a clerk at U. P. Schenck & Son, bought the general store and renamed it “Danner’s Hardware Store.” He bought the enterprise in the same year he married his wife, Effa Morrison, a local historical authority and a founder of the Switzerland County Historical Society. Under Danner’s management, hardware and farm implements made up the firm’s primary product line, but sometime before America’s entry into World War I, he began stocking baseballs and other sporting goods. Danner later served as the first Republican mayor of Vevay. He continued running the store with his son Emmet until his death on December 9, 1952.

Emmet Danner (1909-2001)

Americus’s son Emmet Danner was born on March 20, 1909. He literally grew up in the general store, as the family lived in the two stories above the main level, but only officially started working there in 1929 after graduating from the New Albany Business College. In 1931, he married Helen Pauline Cripe of Madison. The couple had two children, Carolyn Jean and Emmett Michael. Emmett Michael Danner began working for the firm in 1963 and later became its president. Carolyn Danner later pursued her grandmother's interest in history and wrote a small book on the life of Ulysses P. Schenck.

Danner's Hardware Store continued expanding its product line throughout the 20th century. It remained family-owned and operated until 2010, when it was sold to new owners. It was long considered the oldest business in Indiana still in its original location.
