Mountain Photograph Collection, 1882-1905

Scope and Content Note

The Rogers Clark Ballard Thruston Mountain Photograph Collection consists primarily of photographs taken in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky, Eastern Tennessee and Southwestern Virginia. In 1882 Thruston was hired as a geological assistant under Crandall of the Kentucky Geological Survey. The Survey's goal was to explore and record the natural resources in Appalachian counties. Thruston helped survey, photograph, and document the region. The photographs in this exhibit were produced during the mid-1880s when Thruston and Crandall worked for the Kentucky Geological Survey; and from the 1890s through the early 20th century when Thruston continued to work and document Appalachia during his time with the Kentucky Union Land Company.

Historical/Biographical Note

The Mountain Photograph Collection consists primarily of photographs taken in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky, Eastern Tennessee and Southwestern Virginia. In 1882 Thruston was hired as a geological assistant under Crandall of the Kentucky Geological Survey. The Survey's goal was to explore and record the natural resources in Appalachian counties. Thruston helped survey, photograph, and document the region. The photographs in this exhibit were produced during the mid-1880s when Thruston and Crandall worked for the Kentucky Geological Survey; and from the 1890s through the early 20th century when Thruston continued to work and document Appalachia during his time with the Kentucky Union Land Company. The counties featured in this exhibit include: Bath, Bell, Breathitt, Breckinridge, Carter, Elliott, Floyd, Harlan, Knox, Letcher, Pike, Whitley, and Wolfe in Kentucky, and Wise and Lee in Virginia.

Rogers Clark Ballard Thruston (1858-1946)

A member of one of Louisville's most prominent families, Rogers Clark Ballard Thruston was an engineer by education and vocation, and historian and photographer by avocation. Thruston was also a benefactor and longtime president of The Filson Historical Society (1923-1946).

Albert Rogers Crandall (1840-1926)

A native New Yorker, Albert Rogers Crandall was ranked as a leading educator of Wisconsin and a Professor of Natural History at Milton College. Professor Crandall was widely known in educational and scientific circles for his published works on the geology and botany of eastern Kentucky.

*Based on dates on images and letters RCBT wrote to Minnie C. Fox

1876-1880—Graduated from Sheffield Scientific School of Yale College

1880s—After school he returned to Louisville and got a position in the auditor's office of the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago Railway.

1882—July 1st he began work at the Kentucky Geological Survey.

1883—Assigned to the coal fields of the Cumberland River. Crandall and Thruston went from there to Pikeville, Pike County, KY.

1884—October 27th at his mother's request, Rogers Clark Ballard had his name legally changed to Thruston, by an act of the County Court in Fayette County, Kentucky to, carry on the Thruston Name.<sup>1</sup>

1884—Thruston also spent time on the head waters of the Cumberland River in Harlan and Letcher Counties.

1884-1885—Thruston was called in from his work to take charge of the Exposition in Louisville and then to New Orleans for the Exposition of 1884-1885. He featured photographs at both expositions.

1886—Thruston took ill, the mountain fare being too much for him. When he recovered, he was too weak to travel alone, so he took a guide with him and they traveled to Browney's Creek, about the boundary line between Bell and Harlan Counties.

1888—Thruston still traveled between Harlan and Pennington's Gap (not sure why?)

1887-1888---Thruston notes in his letter to Minnie that, "The book which started in 1887 reached such proportions that in late 1888 we built what was known as the Tent Hotel in Big Stone Gap. I doubt if any of it was left so that you could see it unless it was possibly the platforms on which the tents stood. I had one there 16' x 24'. In it was my safe, my desk, two coats and a stove. I occupied it from about the 10th of July 1888 to about the 20th of June, 1889."<sup>2</sup>

1888-1889—July 10th-June 20th 1889, Thruston stayed in a tent in Big Stone Gap.

1889—Thruston states that he left Big Stone Gap to take charge of the Land Bureau of the Kentucky Union Land Company and while in that capacity took many photographs in the Kentucky River Section.<sup>3</sup>

1901—John Fox Jr. publishes "The Southern Mountaineer" in Scribner's Magazine (part 1 April 1901 and part 2 May 1901) both articles feature images from Thruston.

1919—Retired after a successful career as an engineer and geologist active in the eastern Kentucky mining fields, he retired to devote all of his time to Kentucky history and genealogy."<sup>4</sup>

1919—Thruston offered The Filson Historical Society $50,000 as the beginning of an endowment fund and to donate his own private collections and manuscripts if The Filson would procure a house with a fireproof room to house its collections. A few years earlier, in 1913, The Filson's founder Reuben T. Durrett died, and the society seemed to be on the brink of failure.

Verso reads, "Crandall about that time, possibly a year later, got a larger camera, a 6 1/2" x 8 1/2". He got copies of all of my photographs and I got copies of many of his, but not all of them. In that year he took the photograph of the Rockhouse Post Office and Store in Letcher County, used as an illustration by John [Fox, Jr.] on page 48 of "Bluegrass and Rhododendron." I was not with him when the photograph was taken but the old man standing at and leaning against the nearest post in the picture with a bundle of papers in his hand was old man Caudill, the keeper of the store and the postmaster. The Rockhouse Fork of the North Fork of the Kentucky River was so named from a fairly small rockhouse on the south bank of the stream near this Post Office. Caudill told me that his grandparents, I think they were, lived under that rockhouse for over a year before they decided where to build their cabin and start life."
